

Return of the Black Plague

“We are worried about the wide-ranging impact that all these decisions [by RFK Jr.] will have on America’s health security... This is unacceptable, and it should alarm every American, regardless of political leanings.”

Op-ed signed by 9 former CDC Directors published in the New York Times

Bring out your dead.

That is the new mantra of the Department of Health and Human Services. An official HHS press release announcing the department’s new logo, in which a black crow replaces the former eagle, quoted Senator Joni Ernst in reminding the American people that we are all going to die.

HHS Director RFK Jr. (perhaps on advice from the worm in his brain) has ordered that death-postponing health interventions including vaccinations and water fluoridation be replaced by less costly measures such as drinking raw milk and swimming in polluted streams.

RFK Jr.’s policies have been endorsed by Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent who pointed out that lowering life expectancy would do much to postpone the projected bankruptcy of the Social Security program.
