

A Tale of Two Leaders

“[Zelensky] warned them again and again in his speeches that the loss of freedom in one nation erodes the freedom in all the rest.”

Simon Schuster: The Showman: Inside the Invasion That Shook the World and Made a Leader of Volodymyr Zelensky

If you could travel into the future and read a history book written in 2075, you would learn about two leaders who helped define the third decade of the twentieth century: Volodymyr Zelensky and Donald Trump. Historians of the future will describe the contrast between these two leaders and the legacies they each created. They will tell the tale of how...

Volodymyr Zelensky sent his army to fight invading Russians.

Donald Trump sent his army to invade Democratic cities.

Volodymyr Zelensky went out of his way to visit the front lines.

Donald Trump went out of his way to visit his golf courses.

Volodymyr Zelensky saw Putin for the evil dictator he was.

Donald Trump saw Putin for the evil dictator he himself wanted to be.

Volodymyr Zelensky stood up to Putin.

Donald Trump sucked up to Putin.

Volodymyr Zelensky used his previous experience as a comedian to unite a nation.

Donald Trump used his previous experience as a reality television star to divide a nation.

Volodymyr Zelensky informed the Ukrainian people with hard truths.

Donald Trump deceived the American people with baldfaced lies.

Volodymyr Zelensky surrounded himself with capable and strong-willed patriots.

Donald Trump surrounded himself with sycophantic and buffoonish talking heads.

Volodymyr Zelensky defined winning as defeating the aggressor.

Donald Trump defined winning as humiliating the opposition.

Volodymyr Zelensky was an energetic and brilliant young leader.

Donald Trump was a decrepit old man with creeping dementia.

For Volodymyr Avramenko and his brothers on the front lines in Ukraine; Avramenko wrote this for inclusion in Trumpianity:

*Ukraine, a country where courage blooms,
where we stand as one against the gloom,
our souls unyielding, fierce and free,
defying evil's dark decree.*

From An Illustrated History of the World, winner of the Nobel Prize for Literature in the year 2075
